50X1-HUM

1. Early in 1953 German language courses were introduced in the Czechoslovak Army. They are described as part of army political education.
2. These courses have been given especially to NCO's and warrant officers. The terminology taught has led the participants to presume that the knowledge of German they are expected to acquire is what is required by an army of occupation. As a result, these men believe that they are to be used as occupation troops
